

WEAKNESS IN A MAN

By: Mel Gibson

(Words & music by Jerry Chesnut)

Funny how you've changed
It makes me wonder, have I ever really known you
How could you abuse and use
The kindness and tenderness I've shown you
If I'd a known, then I'd have shown
The strength, on which my love could make a stand
But you've mistaken tenderness and kindness
For the weakness in a man

I can give you almost anything
If I know what you're looking for
I can give you everything
That any other man can give, and a little bit more
He may promise you the world
But I can give you everything he can
So don't mistake my tenderness
For any sign of weakness in your man

I may live my life alone
With walls of stone inside some lonely cell
But no man's gonna take the love I own
And ever live to tell the tale
So don't forsake the love we knew
Cuz now you know exactly where I stand
And don't mistake my tenderness
For any sign of weakness in your man

No, don't mistake my tenderness
For any sign of weakness in your man...
Don't mistake my tenderness
For any sign of weakness in your man
